

2021 FAI events hosted by the US

AMA - Academy of Model Aeronautics

Current global restrictions and slower vaccine rollouts in other countries have forced AMA to determine that hosting two international aeromodelling events is not feasible at this time. In working with FAI/CIAM officials, it has been decided that because of previously scheduled events in 2022 in the international RC Aerobatics community, the best course of action is to cancel this year's World Championship for Aerobatic Model Aircraft (F3A) that was scheduled to take place at the International Aeromodelling Center in Muncie, Indiana, in July 2021.

The global COVID-19 pandemic has also affected the F3D/E World Championship for Pylon Racing Model Aircraft. However, this event will be postponed until 2022, and the US will host the world championship at the International Aeromodelling Center in June or July 2022.
